AFL Demands Voice In Peace, Reconversion

POST-WAR ROLE IN PRODUCTION COUNCILS ASKED

Annual Labor Assembly Set For Approval Of Broad Program

STRIVING FOR UNITY

Unions Seek To Safeguard Against Recession For 13,000,000 Members

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 29—The 600 delegates to the AFL's annual convention prepared today to stamp their approval on a board program demanding a voice for labor at the peace table and in the United States' reconversion and post-war production councils.

The principal terms in the Federation's platform included:

- 1.—Establishment, with U. S. participation, of an international organization with powers to prevent aggression.
- 2.—Creation on an economic commission composed of labor, agriculture and business to "make the policies to guide war mobilization, reconversion and reconstruction and re-employment."
- 3.—Uppermost in the minds of the practical-minded labor leaders here in New Orleans, however, was the realization that labor must achieve unity within itself and safeguard against any post-war recession in its record-breaking membership of 13,000,000.

Fears For Unity

Woodruff Randolph, president of the International Typographical Union, voiced the fears which lay behind the AFL's bid for unity with the CIO and a re-invitation to John L. Lewis to bring his 600,000 miners back into the Federation.

Pointing out that unions have increased their membership from 3,000,000 at the outset of President Roosevelt's administration to 13,000,000 at the present time, Randolph said:

"The question we have to answer as regards the future is whether it is worth while to try to maintain the union status of 10 million members of organized labor who have had short experience in unions. Will that experience keep them solid on organized labor?"

Labor Philosophy

"The 13 million men and women have absorbed labor philosophy. Our program today is to see that this is maintained. It will not be maintained by an attitude of isolation, by an attitude that we are better, wiser and stronger. If we are, we can demonstrate it by associating with them on fundamental procedures."

"If it is impossible for the AFL, as it seems to have been, to absorb the miners, how much tougher will it be to absorb the CIO. Most of us realize there is no possibility the CIO will dissolve and join the AFL."

Saipan-Based Raids On Tokyo May Soon Force Fight for Bonin Isles

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—Saipan-based bombing raids on Tokyo may soon force an intensified battle for the strategically placed Bonin islands unless Japan plans to abandon them entirely, competent military observers believed today.

The Bonins, site of many Jap airfields and other facilities, lie on the direct path to the Jap capital. They are just 862 land miles from Saipan and 632 miles southeast of Tokyo. If they retain any military effectiveness, the Japs can launch fighters against the B-29's as they pass on their mission or force the latter to long detours.

As far as can be determined, they have not been an effective deterrent to the two previously announced B-29 Tokyo raids, since none of the few enemy claimed losses occurred over the Jap mainland.

This ineffectiveness is believed due primarily to the numerous neutralization assaults on Jap airfields and other installations in the Bonins. The last of these to be announced occurred Friday when Seventh Army liberators dropped bombs on the Jap radio station at Chichi Jima.

The radio station obviously could be used to warn Tokyo of the approach of U. S. bombing forces long before they arrived, thus permitting the alerting of anti-aircraft defenses.

The present situation is such, it is believed, that Japan must soon make up her mind whether to abandon the Bonins or risk a substantial engagement to hold them.

This would involve the dispatch of at least a substantial part of the Jap fleet, already licking the wounds received in the recent Philippine battles. It would involve reinforcing the troops already there and a desperate attempt to re-establish and maintain airfields and air forces in the face of strong assault.

Since Saipan has given every indication that it has sufficient air forces to counter any such move, it is believed unlikely that the Jap high command would accept the risk.

If she fails to do so, however, there is always the possibility that Allied forces might seek to make the islands theirs. By reducing the round trip flight from Saipan to Tokyo from the present 3,000 miles to a mere 1,270 miles, the bomb loads carried by the Superfortresses and the number of raids weekly could be greatly increased.

"NUBBINS" ON RECOVERY ROAD, PHYSICIAN SAYS

DENVER, Nov. 29 — Forrest "Nubbins" Hoffman, three-year-old Cheyenne, Wyo., boy, who it was feared would not live until Christmas because of a bladder tumor, is improving every day, his physician declared today.

"Nubbins is eating three square meals a day and his blood was normal in the last test indicating his kidneys are recovering somewhat from the damage inflicted when poison spread through his system," his physician explained.

Nubbins is having a big time at the hospital. Yesterday he was out of bed and playing with some of the hundreds of toys sent him from all over the nation for his "Christmas" party ten days ago, but he likes a colored Mother Goose book best.

An operation will be performed as soon as Nubbins gains enough strength.

SECOND SON OF PRESIDENT TO WED ACTRESS

NEW YORK, Nov. 29—Col. Elliott Roosevelt, 34, second son of the President, and Faye Emerson, 27, Warner Brothers actress, will be married in Los Angeles within the next few days, the New York Journal-American said today.

Col. Roosevelt, now on leave from the 8th Army Air Force reconnaissance wing, met the actress about a year ago in New York City. Since that time the various reports have said they were engaged or preparing to elope, the paper said.

This will be the third marriage for the colonel.

APPEALS COURT RULING NEAR IN COLLETT CASE

Decision On Appeal To Be Made Public In Next Few Days

SENTENCED TO DEATH

Opinion Already Reached And Being Prepared By Court Stenographer

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 29—Whether the Second District appellate court grants a new trial to James W. Collett, 60-year-old Clinton county hog breeder sentenced to die in the electric chair for the triple murder of the Elmer McCoy family, will be announced either late this week or early next week, International News Service learned today.

Judge Roscoe G. Hornbeck of London, who presided when the court heard Collett's appeal last Oct. 10, probably will release the decision at London, O. It was learned that the decision has been made and turned over to a court stenographer for preparation.

Convicted By Jury

Collett was convicted of slaying Elmer McCoy, his wife, Forrest, and their daughter, Mildred, Thanksgiving eve of 1943. He has been in death row at Ohio Penitentiary since shortly after his trial at Washington, C. H., near the scene of the murders.

Under Ohio law, the Appellate court will determine either the date of execution, if no exceptions to the trial are found, or will set a new trial date, providing errors alleged by the defense are sustained.

Collett's attorneys, in argument and briefs filed with the appellate court, cited ten instances of alleged error, including the charges that a confession Collett made in Toledo under a lie detector was obtained under duress.

May Ask Review

If Collett's appeal is denied, his attorneys may ask the Ohio Supreme Court for a review of the case. If that were also denied, a commutation of sentence by the governor would be the only way in which Collett could escape death in the electric chair.

Hearing the case with Judge Hornbeck were Judges Frank G. Geiger of Springfield and Charles A. Guernsey of the Third District Court of Appeals. Judge Guernsey filled in because of the illness of Judge Joseph D. Barnes of Sidney.

STRIKERS MAY DECIDE TO GIVE SHELLS TO ARMY

DETROIT, Nov. 29—Continued production of heavy ammunition hinged today on the outcome of a meeting of 75 millwrights who are on strike at the Cross Company.

The meeting was called after the War Labor Board appealed for an end to the strike at the plant, one of two in the nation producing lathes for the manufacture of shells. The shop closed Monday when the workers struck protesting the dismissal of two of their number.

The WLB hinted that unless the dispute is settled, the government may seize the plant.

Another serious strike continued for a third day at the Ford Rouge plant, where 7,195 employees were forced into idleness because of lack of materials caused by a strike of 75 foundrymen. Representatives of UAW-CIO local 600 were attempting to negotiate the work schedule grievance which prompted the walkout Monday.

Twenty-three welders at the Graham-Paige plant have been suspended for stopping work on "alligator" tractors for the Navy, according to E. D. Riodran, industrial relations director.

Congress To Put Curb On Power of Petrillo, Sen. Tunnel Predicts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—Sen. James M. Tunnel (D) Del., predicted today that the senate will approve a resolution placing a curb on the power of President James Caesar Petrillo of the American Federation of Musicians.

Tunnel is chairman of an interstate commerce subcommittee, which made a report on the Vandenberg resolution making it a crime for anyone to conspire to stop broadcasting of noncommercial educational or cultural programs. The full committee approved the report.

"Access to the air should be free for amateur, educational productions," said Tunnel.

The Vandenberg resolution grew out of Petrillo's ban on broadcasting of the national high school orchestra at the music festival at Interlochen, Mich.

Tunnel said that congress may be inclined to go ever further in the future in curbing Petrillo.

"There are those who think that we should go much further," he said. "I recall that the President said, when Petrillo refused to lift the ban on making records, that he was looking up the law. I assume he found no law. If anything is done, there must be new legislation."

"I am not anti-labor, but I am against the kind of a club used at Interlochen being used by anyone."

Sen. Burton K. Wheeler (D) Mont., interstate commerce committee chairman, said meanwhile that the Vandenberg resolution had no connection with the other quarrels of Petrillo and the broadcasting companies.

"I could not see any reason why anyone should have the right to say that an organization made up of school children should not be permitted to sing or play over the air," said Wheeler.

"We talk about free speech and free radio, but there is no free speech if one person, or a group, can say that school children shall not be permitted to sing over the radio when they are not being paid. They could not possibly come in competition with the Petrillo organization."

Vandenberg expressed satisfaction over the committee report. Even if the measure cannot be passed in the present session, the committee report will give it a passed in the present session, the next congress, he said.

WOOD ALCOHOL FATAL DRINK FOR THREE MEN

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29—Three men were dead today and five other persons were made ill, two seriously, after they drank wood alcohol at a party given, according to detectives, by Robert Smith, 34-year-old North Philadelphia.

The dead were identified by police as Smith; Marine Pfc. Leslie Manty, 23, stationed at the Philadelphia Navy yard, and Charles Zeppelin, 44, of Philadelphia.

Bond Report Shows Sales Of $72,855

Eshelman Company Makes $50,000 Purchase; Show Scheduled

John W. Eshelman and Sons has purchased $50,000 in series C bonds through the Pickaway county War Finance committee, Chairman Clark Will announced Wednesday.

The purchase is a big boost in the early stages of the Sixth War Loan drive to raise $1,286,000 in Pickaway county, Mr. Will said.

He said the purchase was arranged through Robert Musser, manager of the plant and a member of the special projects committee. Eshelman's has been one of the leading plants in war loan purchases in the county, Mr. Will said. The payroll savings plan has been in effect in the plant for some time and several employees of the plant are serving as solicitors in the Sixth War Loan drive.

Reports for the first few days of the drive showed a total of $72,855 had been raised in the county, Mr. Will said. Latest available totals, which do not include any sales made this week, show that individual purchases total $56,855 while sales to corporations amount to $16,000.

Mr. Will reminded solicitors to make their contacts as soon as possible so that canvassing can be completed by December 1.

The Grand theatre, in cooperation with the War Stamp and Bond sale program of the Circleville public schools, will entertain at a premier show Friday at 3:15 p. m. any grade school boy or girl of the city schools who buys or sells even as low as $1 worth of stamps.

STUDENT MAKES COLLEGE PREXY ATTEND CLASSES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—When Dr. Franklin Bliss Snyder, president of Northwestern University sold his services for one day to the highest bidder in a student war bond rally, he agreed to meet any demands "within reason."

Miss Roselyn Keeshin, who bought the university president's services with a high bid of $3,500 in bonds, today invited Dr. Snyder to "pay off" by attending classes with her beginning at 10 a. m. Her first class was in Shakespeare, and her second in education.

The student-sponsored rally yielded $121,675 in Sixth War Loan Bonds.

BICYCLE TAGS MUST BE BOUGHT BY DECEMBER 1

Chief of Police McCrady Wednesday warned that December 1 was the deadline for obtaining bicycle licenses.

He stated that after that date all bicycles without licenses would be picked up and held at the police station until licenses are purchased.

Licenses may be purchased at the police station until 8 p. m. Wednesday and Thursday, Chief McCrady said.

FALL OF FIVE STORIES FAILS TO KILL WOMAN

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 — Mrs. Cecelia Peterson, 43, of Sandusky, O., still lived today after plunging from her fifth floor room in a New York hotel this morning and dropping three stories on the hotel marquee.

Clad in a night dress, Mrs. Peterson landed with such a resounding noise that firemen of a hook and ladder company across the street were aroused and rushed to the rescue.

A fire rescue squad, six miles away was summoned, but before the squad arrived, she had been exsanguinated. Mrs. Peterson was taken to Beth David hospital, suffering from fractures of both legs and a fractured skull.

YANKS AIMING AT INDUSTRIAL CORE OF REICH

Other U. S. Units Sweep Toward Break-Through, Capture Hurtgen

BATTLE DETAILS SCANT

Blackout Of News Again May Be Foreshadowing Momentous Events

By International News Service
The richest part of Nazi Germany's industrial core was threatened with imminent penetration today by troops of the United States Third Army under Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., and at the same time other American units swept toward a breakthrough onto the plains of Cologne by final capture of Hurtgen.

History will have to tell the full details of what is implied in seizure of that little town in the midst of a forest which bears its name. For in no war up to the present has a village been more bitterly contested and its outskirts more liberally stained with blood.

The laconic communiques from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and even dispatches from front-line war correspondents, heavily censored for reasons of military security, have thrown but little light on the terrible losses and almost indescribable difficulties of fighting in the heavily wooded area.

Nazis Pessimistic
But Nazi propaganda agencies, less inhibited in the use of superlatives, painted a grim picture in one line of a broadcast which described the Hurtgen fighting—and all that in the vast and decisive sectors east of Aachen — as "the bloodiest and most terrible" of the war.

With Hurtgen now overrun, the Allies are "out of the woods" in a purely literal sense. The tanglewood of Rhineland wilderness lies behind them and the lowlands of Cologne lie ahead. The stage is more than ever set for the great and final push, and Patton's entry into the Saar basin may be the signal for its beginning.

At last reports, Patton's army was only five miles from Saarbrücken, the immediate goal of Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin in the strange, productless days of the war in 1940. The Germans, by their own admission, were withdrawing to a new line south of the border of the Palatinate, east of the Saar, and it would come as no surprise to find that the enemy has evacuated Saarbrücken, realizing the futility of attempting to fight for its retention.

Notable Victories
Gen. Patton and his magnificent army of battle-tested experts have achieved many notable victories, with reduction of supposedly impregnable Metz thus far on top of the list.

But seizure of Saarbrücken will eclipse even this achievement, for by so doing he will have pushed the banner of America and of conquest into the real heart of German industry. Even in the Ruhr, for all its wealth of natural resources in coal and iron, is to a large extent dependent on what is obtained from the Saarland.

It was more than mere "intuition" that prompted Adolf Hitler to engineer this area's return to Germany as his first act of aggression against the world on his seizure of power.

Battlefront dispatches for the second successive day were scant in revelation of details concerning Allied advances, which indicated that field headquarters had imposed something in the nature of another blackout of the type (Continued on Page Two) which in the past has clearly foreshadowed momentous events.

Big Push On Way

Yet it was clear that the offensive was well under way. Gen. Eisenhower was disclosed to have been in conference at advance headquarters with Field Marshal Sir Bernard Law Montgomery, and London newspapers viewed this meeting as the forerunner to a "knockout blow."

The hard-shelled nubs of enemy resistance continued to stand at Saarbrücken and the ancient fortress town of Julich on the Roer river. Allied troops in preponderant numbers were massed at that stream, only a few yards wide, but made formidable by its steep banks, and it was safe to assume that American engineers were preparing to set up their rapid-fire Bailey bridges for instantaneous crossings or engaged in the work of spanning pontoons across the obstacle.

All organized German resistance was overcome in the town of Kollar, the satellite base protecting Julich and the town of Jungersdorf, only four miles west of Duren, the last main railway station west of Cologne itself, was overwhelmed.

Street Fighting

Bitter street fighting took place before Jungersdorf was taken, but the Nazis finally retreated to the countryside. Whether they intend to defend Duren as they did Aachen and other cities sacrificed by German stubbornness to the might of Allied guns and bombs was a matter for time to decide.

The Allied offensive, which promises before the week is over to decide whether the war against Germany will go through into the new year, was favored by suitable flying weather.

American and British planes ranged constantly over the fighting lines, and to cut deeper into German production and increase the steady attrition of Nazi reserve strength, thousands of Allied bombing and fighter craft ripped and tore at Northwestern Germany.

Record Assault

On the heels of a record night assault by Mosquito bombers on Nurnberg, where Hitler used to rally his party followers in November of every year for an orgy of self-praise and wholesale insult to the civilized world, more than 1,000 Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by an equal number of fighter craft, blasted an oil refinery as Meiburg, railway marshaling yards at Hamm and numerous other objectives.

Essen also again was attacked, as was the supply center of Neuss behind the western fighting front, which was hit by four-motored Lancaster and Halifax bombers of the Royal Air Force.

Soviet troops drove steadily forward in Czechoslovakia and in Italy, British Eighth Army forces closed in on the communications center of Faenza.

The Far Eastern front witnessed new devastating assaults by American bombers against Japanese island positions and a Tokyo claim that strong "counter-invasion" Japanese forces have landed on Morotai island in the Halmahera group between New Guinea and the Philippines.

TENNIS SECOND TO MANGIN NOW

Net Star At Lockbourne After 50 Missions As Fortress Gunner

Staff Sergeant Gregory S. Mangin, who as a member of the U. S. Davis Cup team helped his country defeat Germany, Italy and Austria in tennis, has returned from 50 missions overseas in which he played a part in serving aerial death to these same countries as a tail gunner on a Flying Fortress.

Sgt. Mangin, now stationed at Lockbourne Army Air Base, is well remembered by tennis fans as one of the outstanding indoor stars of all time, winning the national indoor singles title four times, and the doubles championship twice. He also was a member of the Davis Cup team from 1931 through 1937.

Right now, tennis is secondary to this war hero who during his tour of duty overseas earned the Distinguished Flying Cross with one bronze Oak Leaf Cluster, the Air Medal with one silver cluster, the Purple Heart with one bronze cluster and the North American and North African Theatre ribbons.

Mangin entered the Army in 1942 and served nine months with a dive bomber outfit on Atlantic submarine patrol, from Fall, 1942 until the Summer of 1943. His ship was an A-24.

"It was rather dull," he recalls. "We didn't even get a chance at a sub, so I put in for foreign service." That was how he joined the crew of a Flying Fortress which went overseas last February and took part in 50 missions over Germany, Austria, France and Italy, bombing cities he had visited in pre-war days as a tennis star.

Mangin received the first of his two DFC's for what he terms his toughest mission, the bombing of Weimer-Neustadt, just outside of Vienna last May. The flak and enemy fighters were the thickest he ever saw, and from his tail gunner's position on the B-17, he shot down two ME 109's.

He received the oak leaf cluster to the DFC for the first of his five raids on the Ploesti oil fields during which he was credited with two probable enemy fighters.

The tennis star had a couple of narrow escapes from death. On a raid over Treviso in northern Italy, flak pulverized the glass of his tail turret and the medics had to take out 14 pieces of glass from his right eye and three from his left. Luckily, his vision wasn't impaired.

A raid on Toulon, France in which his pilot had to make a crash landing at Naples near his home field after a tough flak pounding saw Mangin receive some wounds under his left jaw.

Mangin, who has been retired from active tennis competition since 1938, first broke into the national limelight in 1928 when as a student at Georgetown university, he defeated Johnny Doe, later national champion, for the intercollegiate title.

From 1928 until 1938, he was ranked among the top ten players in the country and during his play with the Davis Cup team, helped win the cup in 1935, 1936, 1937 and 1938. He also won the Irish singles and doubles titles, teaming with Sidney Wood in the doubles.

The last tennis he played was an exhibition against Don Budge at Miami in 1942, when he was stationed in the Florida vacation spot. Mangin has been assigned to duty with the base orientation officer at Lockbourne. His home is in Newark, New Jersey.

CONSCRIPTS IN CANADA STIR MORE TROUBLE

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 29.—Canadian authorities girded for more serious trouble today as demonstrations continued among conscripted troops now liable for overseas service.

Far from abating, the demonstrations seemed to be taking a more serious turn as 1,500 armed troops at Terrace, B. C., prevented a regiment at a nearby camp from boarding a waiting troop train.

The troops, armed with rifles and a brew gun and wearing helmets, marched in ragged formation from Camp 2, west of the town to Camp 3 east of the Hamlet, from whence the regiment was scheduled to depart. The marchers, who staged the parade itself in defiance of orders forbidding demonstrations, also took a truck with them.

In the face of the threat, the regiment scheduled for overseas duty stayed in its camp.

No attempt was made to halt the demonstrators, and troopsfolk said they behaved "very well as they marched through Terrace."

Canadian authorities also disclosed that an order reciting penalties for mutiny or rioting—penalties which include life imprisonment—had been read to men at several camps in northern British Columbia.

SABOTEURS HALT GERMAN TRAINS ALONG RHINE

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Not a single German train has moved along the north bank of the Rhine above Switzerland since Tuesday morning, a dispatch to the London Standard from the Swiss-Alastian frontier said today.

The fact was attributed by Germans to coordinate sabotage by formations of Allied parachutists.

ARMY OLYMPIC GAMES TO BE HELD IN PARIS

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Plans for a gigantic overseas sports program after V-Day—highlighted by an Allied Army Olympics in Paris—were confirmed today by Maj. John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the Western Conference.

Promising to be the most gigantic sports undertaking of all time, the enterprise will be under direction of Col. Eskey Clark, former Harvard athletic star, and Lieut. Col. Frank McCormick, former Minnesota athletic director, who now is athletic officer in the European theatre.

The program is undertaken to supply diversion and entertainment for troops awaiting transportation home in the demobilization period. Competition will be open to every member of the Allied forces, including soldiers assigned to the army of occupation in Germany.

A group of 100 college and high school coaches, officials, sports writers and athletes will be included in an entourage that will go from the United States to help plan the sports carnival.

ESSEN, MEUSS HARD HIT BY BIG BOMBERS

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Heavyweight British Lancaster and Halifax bombers carried out strong attacks early today against the Ruhr industrial city of Essen and the communications and supply base of Meuss behind the western front. The assaults followed a night attack against Nurnberg, Nazi shrine city, with block-busters dropped by the greatest force of Mosquito bombers ever dispatched against Germany.

In the blows against Essen and Meuss, which was hammered only 24 hours before, large fires were started.

In the Nurnberg attack industrial districts were the principal targets of the Mosquitos.

Pathfinders marked the target areas and the subsequent bombing was concentrated in the designated areas. Tremendous explosions followed, returning fliers said.

Britain's ministry of home security announced meanwhile that during the night and until daylight today the Germans continued to send explosives down on Southern England, causing new damage and casualties.

Annual Labor Assembly Set For Approval Of Broad Program

AFL We should be able to talk with them and arrive at definite understandings on objectives and procedure."

AFL President William Green underscored Randolph's remarks by offering to resign if necessary to attain labor unity. Green said he would forget the attacks of Lewis, his "hatred of some individual" to bring the UMW back to the AFL.

"It is difficult to understand the attitude of CIO leaders," Green said. "When this emergency has passed, if we are then divided wasting our energy and fighting each other it will not be the leaders who will pay but the workers of America."

The AFL's other major action includes a decision to appeal direct to President Roosevelt for higher wages, by-passing the War Labor Board, and a refusal to recommend abolition of Negro "auxiliary unions."

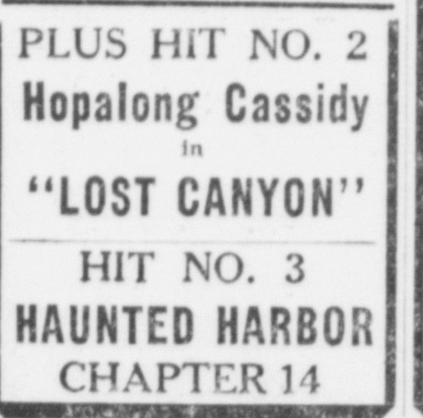

George Meany, AFL secretary-treasurer and member of the W.F.B., demanded higher wages now as imperative to full post-war production, but admitted that if President Roosevelt says no, the AFL will seek the concessions granted last week to the CIO steel workers.

Meany termed the prophecies of 60 million post-war jobs "a damnable untruth," until backed up with adequate provision for full post-war purchasing power, full production and full employment. President Roosevelt made such a prophecy.

Fleeing German soldiers, says a news item, disguised themselves as sheep. For them it probably was no trick at all.

lighter shell. Today these guns are well forward along the Western Front, throwing shells on targets far to the enemy's rear with the aid of aerial observation.

Heavy American artillery of this type has proved a source of amazement to the Germans because of its mobility. The Germans have used such heavy guns only where railway servicing is possible instead of mounting them on carriages which can be towed across the countryside by prime movers.

At St. Malo a battery of the giant 8-inch guns direct fire at 2,000 yards on the Citadel Fort. Later, after being used at Brest, the battery moved hundreds of miles to new positions in a five-day march, an example of mobility never before known to heavy artillery. The mount and gun together weigh 35 tons, but the unit can move nearly as fast as light field artillery.

Twenty-four men make up the full crew of an 8-inch gun, which can be made ready for firing several hours after arriving at a new position.

Emmet Evans Fighting With Famous Unit In Gen. Clark's Fifth Army

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, ITALY—Cpl. Emmet Evans, of Circleville, is a gunner in the historic First Tank Battalion, currently fighting as part of Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army in Northern Italy.

One of the tank battalions of the First Armored Division, the First has 61 battle streamers dating from the year 1833 when its parent organization, the First U. S. Cavalry Regiment, was fighting in the Indian Wars, and extending through 111 years to the battle of the Arno River in Italy when the unit was relieved.

WATER PLANT DISCUSSED AT TWO MEETINGS

Arguments Against And For Purchase Offered At Sessions

Arguments for and against city purchase of the Circleville plant of the Ohio Water Service company were heard at two meetings Tuesday night.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce and Junior Chamber of Commerce heard City Solicitor Joseph Adkins present the city officials' side of the question at a meeting in Hanley's restaurant. Following the meeting several members went to the public meeting in the court house at which G. Taylor Evans, Struthers, Ohio, vice president and general manager of the Ohio Water Service company, talked.

Mr. Adkins compared rates of other communities with rates here. He also said that a conversation with Hillsboro officials revealed the increase in rates proposed, there was necessary because the town had been required to take steps to obtain a new source of supply of water. The present supply is inadequate and new wells are necessary at Hillsboro, Mr. Adkins told his audience.

He declared the question to be voted on at the special election Tuesday was an ordinance passed by council which would give the city the right to have a jury, on the advice of experts, determine the value of the water plant. He said that if the case goes into court and a value is set, then the city council will pass a mortgage revenue bond ordinance which also would be subject to referendum.

A. A. Ulrich, manager of the Massillon plant of the Ohio Water Service company, was introduced following Mr. Adkins' talk. He invited those present to go to the court house and hear the water company's side of the question.

At the water company meeting Mr. Evans answered statements made by Solicitor Adkins and other city officials at a public meeting held two weeks ago.

He said a softening plant would cost about $50,000 and that if wells are driven to supply water more expenses would be incurred.

Questions from the floor were invited by Carl Leist, who served as chairman of the meeting. Several questions were asked by councilmen and Solicitor Adkins.

STEADY PRICES, SOUND MONEY

WHILE the military forces of this nation are engaged in driving back the enemy on many fronts, the government is trying to hold steady the economic front. That is, trying to prevent any serious rise in prices and wages. This is as much a part of the big fight as is the military action, although it is less glamorous and often misunderstood.

It is easy for business men to say: "We are going through a hard period and need more financial freedom to carry on with the job." It is easy for workers in the war factories to say: "We are working faithfully and patriotically, and think we deserve more pay." Many of them do not see that these two aims, more business profit and more industrial pay, cancel each other.

That is not all. With a combination of higher profit and higher pay there begins a rising spiral of prices which may bring as much financial danger to the home front as there is military danger on the fighting front. For it means that dollars lose value, so that more and more wages or salary is needed to give people the equivalent of what they had before. Savings are worth less, creditors are cheated, and eventually everybody loses.

In a time like this, financial and economic principles should be as sacred as the Ten Commandments. There might be an eleventh commandment: "Thou shalt not corrupt thy national currency."

U. S. Peace-Time Army
Of at Least 500,000?

Old Age Tax to Double
On Jan. 1, Unless—

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Rep. Andrew J. May (D.) of Kentucky, chairman of the House military affairs committee, believes that the nation's peace-time Army probably will consist of 500,000 to 600,000 men.

This would be almost double our pre-war Army, which numbered 302,968 enlisted men and 23,192 officers on Aug. 31, 1940—its lowest point since World War I. The Army now consists of approximately eight million men, while the Navy, according to Chairman David I. Walsh (D.) of Massachusetts of the Senate naval affairs committee, has about three and a half million officers and men. May said he did not know how large a Navy personnel was being planned for after the war but that presumably it would be considerably larger than its previous peace-time strength.

MORE THAN 60 MILLION WORKERS should get ready for another tax increase Jan. 1—an automatic doubling of the old age pension payroll tax check, like the income withholding levy, is deducted from pay checks.

A movement has been started in Congress by Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R.) of Michigan to freeze the tax at present rates. But while Vandenberg has been successful in forcing through a tax-freeze provision in each of the last three years, his luck is in danger of running out this time.

The reason is that there is no revenue bill from the House on which to fasten a tax-freeze provision this year. And if one does come along, it may be an unimportant measure which President Roosevelt would not hesitate to veto.

In past years, Vandenberg has succeeded in nailing tax-freeze riders

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

PRESIDENT LOATH TO TRAVEL

WASHINGTON—Inside fact is that Harry Hopkins had a great deal to do with the postponement of Roosevelt's proposed Big-Three conference with Churchill and Stalin, though military advisers also heartily concurred and urged postponement.

One reason was that Stalin wouldn't budge out of Russia, didn't want to come even to Teheran or some other non-Russian, neutral spot. He said he was busy fighting the war and couldn't spare the time. This excuse was understandable when Russia had Nazi armies on her soil. But now the Red Army is largely on enemy soil and the tables are reversed.

While the President in the past has been glad to go to Teheran, and has proposed meetings in Alaska, Eastern Siberia adjoining Alaska, or any other reasonable place, he did not feel that he should trek half way around the world a second time, especially when he had some pressing problems of his own at home, among them a new Congress and a possible Cabinet reorganization.

ROOSEVELT IN THE MIDDLE

Perhaps even more important, however, was the fact that the main points to be discussed at the Big-Three meeting were political problems between Britain and Russia, in which Roosevelt would have found himself right in the middle.

The President acted as middleman between Churchill and Stalin at Teheran in ironing out the Balkans, plus the time and place of the Second Front. FDR swung his weight with Stalin when it came to the Second Front, and also veered toward Stalin regarding the right of Russia to influence Bulgaria, Romania and the eastern half of the Balkans.

However, a lot more problems between Stalin and Churchill have arisen to be ironed out and the President is thinking twice before plunging himself down in the middle. One is Iran, where Moscow newspapers already are complaining about the presence of U. S. troops, even though those troops were sent there to speed lend-lease supplies to Russia.

DIFFICULT PROBLEMS AHEAD

Another is the Dardenelles and Russia's long-cherished ambition for an outlet through the Black Sea. Another is Greece, where there are the still difficult problems of Poland and the states bordering between Russia and western Europe.

All of this has made the President think twice about landing in the middle of a Russian-British clash of interest. This clash, it is recognized, is bound to exist. It has existed between the British Empire and the Russian Empire ever since the Crimean War, when British troops went to the side of Turkey to prevent the Czar from penetrating through the Dardenelles.

It is the century-old fight by the British to keep the Slavs, with the greatest land mass in the world, bottled up, with no warm water port giving them access to the sea.

While the President must face this problem eventually, he is being urged to wait until Stalin is in a more negotiable frame of mind. The British, on the other hand, believe these problems should not be postponed, should be faced immediately. They are urging that the Big-Three conference not be postponed. The Weak Stomach

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

THE WORLD can be divided in a number of different ways, such as male and female, or those who have card sense and those who do not have card sense, and one division is those who have strong stomachs and those who have weak stomachs.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Division is those who have strong stomachs and those who have weak stomachs.

The weak stomachs are as sensitive as a debutante at her first party: anything upsets them—strange food, bad news, the slightest inflammation—everything goes to the stomach. They have discomfort in that region, they care nothing about food, they have no appetite, they look at their tongues in the mirror.

The ones with strong stomachs on the other hand can digest anything: they really carry it to excess because not infrequently we find at autopsy some fellow who has carried a deep large ulcer in his stomach for years and never said a word about it.

Use of Gastroscopy
It used to be the fashion to say of the weak stomach group that they had gastritis, which means inflammation of the stomach wall. Then for various reasons the term went out of fashion. Principally because after death the stomach rapidly begins to digest itself and at autopsy people who had that diagnosis pinned on them were not found to have any inflammatory changes in the stomach that could be demonstrated or seen with the microscope.

But within the last few years an instrument called the gastroscope has been invented, which is a very ingenious little gadget that has an electric light on the end of it, can be swallowed without too much trouble and through an arrangement of mirrors the inside of the stomach can be inspected. Now in living stomachs in many instances of indigestion a gastritis can be seen, so the term has come back into use.

Not Serious Disease
It is not a serious disease, but it might as well be because it makes its owners very uncomfortable. They have discomfort after meals, sometimes even bleed from the stomach wall, they have gas and bloating and a sense of fullness through the entire bowel.

In searching for the causes of the condition the first thought would be alcohol, but careful investigation seldom shows this to be the case. Dr. Seymour Gray was gastroscopic examiner of 100 alcoholic addicts and found a perfectly normal appearing stomach in over half of them and in most of the rest the changes were surprisingly mild. Tobacco however, is more likely to injure the stomach mucosa, especially in the form of chewing tobacco. Food, or food habits, did not seem to play an important role. The cause of most of the cases remained undetected. It seems that there are people who are just fated to have poor stomachs.

The treatment is quite satisfactory if you can keep the person with the gastritis in a cheerful frame of mind. This is, of course, easier said than done. By all means steer him away from surgeons, from the boy who is over eager to show his skill with the knife. Diet is important more on the grounds of how often rather than what they eat. Big meals distend them and make them gassy and uncomfortable so four or five small meals a day are better than three big ones. The nutrition is important and vitamin rich foods should be selected and also such blood building foods as liver and iron containing foods—such as eggs. Some doctors have had success with very large doses of Vitamin A.

Drugs do not play much of a part in the treatment. If there is spasm a little belladonna now and then affords relief and depending on whether the condition is accompanied by an increase or a decrease in the secretions of the stomach, substitute gastric juice in the form of hydrochloric acid and pepsin, or antacids in the form of soda bicarbonate are given.

The principle thing is to impress on the patient that he will get well if he takes a philosophic attitude.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
H. M. M.:—Will taking cathartics for years cause cancer of the stomach or bowels?
Answer: No, but they irritate the stomach and bowels so that the feeling is as if a cancer were present.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

"Pete," asked Craig suddenly, "did you see Nicky anywhere?" "No. But I kept thinking there was a thief or some kind of intruder. I opened a couple of windows and hung out each one trying to see someone but didn't. Finally I heard voices and came downstairs. Everybody was very upset. Maud was crying at the telephone. Nicky was in the library."

Nicky, when questioned, simply denied knowing anything of vase, stairway or twine. "Why would I do anything like that? I didn't murder Conrad. I know nothing about it. I was sound asleep when the sound that you say was the vase rolling downstairs awakened me. Have you any news of Drue?"

Of course there was none. I got up and made another fruitless trip around the house—to her room, up and down the stairs, into the library. When I got back, Peter and Nicky were gone and Craig had given Nugent the Frederic Miller checks.

"I didn't know this till last night," he said, their heads close together over the endorsed, canceled checks. "But I think I know what they are. And I think I may have something to do with my father's death."

Nugent's eyes glittered green fire. Craig said wearily, "I didn't at first connect it with my father's death. I can't really connect it now—except the checks ought not to have been where they were found."

"Where ought they have been?" "In his desk, of course. He kept all canceled checks for five years. Obviously they were removed. He may have removed them himself. Or Alexia may have done so. Certainly she must have known they were there."

Nugent looked at me. "Exactly how and where did you find them?" I told him in detail. When I'd finished he looked for a long time at the checks.

"Do you know the handwriting?" he asked Craig.

"No. So far as I know, I've never seen it before."

"We can investigate," we will." He turned the checks over again to look at the cancellation. "They've been cashed at different banks."

"Yes, I noticed that," said Craig. "Two in New York City and one in Newark."

"Mm," said Nugent, which was not illuminating. "The F.B.I. are always ready to help with anything like this, and they have a vast system of records."

"But . . ." began Craig, then stopped; and Nugent snapped, "What were you going to say, Brent?"

"Well, it's not very pleasant. But it was only a—prejudice on father's part. It didn't last long. And after the war began he had changed his heart. He still didn't—well, didn't really want me to go into the air force; that is, he used my wish to do so as a lever for something else he wanted. . . ."

Craig glanced at me; then went on, "But the fact is for years he has been—"

"Germanic in sympathy," cut in Nugent.

"Yes," admitted Craig as quietly. "How did you know?"

"Obviously," said Nugent. "Coat of arms in his study was of German origin. I looked it up in a history of heraldry."

"Yes," said Craig, "but it didn't mean much, really. It was only a kind of hobby. He read German history, you know; loved it when some early robber baron, or later statesman, or title was connected with his family. He was always like that. During the First World War though, he swerved instantly around; he was all on the side of the Allies and against Germany. I knew he would do the same thing when this war came and he did."

"But before Pearl Harbor?" queried Nugent.

"He lined up with Germany. When Hitler began his rise to power, my father was taken with the idea of encouraging the youth movements, bringing back old German ideas of family life, that kind of thing. It was purely theoretical on my father's part. He had no faint idea of the real brutality and ruthlessness which lay behind all of it. He wouldn't believe it for a time, even when it was increasingly evident to everybody else in the world."

Nugent said nothing; I thought of my early impression of Conrad Brent's obsession.

Craig said, "He had changed, believe me, Nugent. As soon as the war began he knew where his real sympathies lay. He was patriotic and sincere. It was only that it was hard for my father to retreat publicly from a stand he had taken."

"Do you mean," said Nugent, "that these checks were somehow connected with sabotage or anything of the kind?"

"Good grief, no! He'd never have done that."

"What then?" "I tell you I don't know. But that night—the night he died—you remember the clipping?"

"The clipping that was in his desk and that Mrs. Brent went and got for him, during the bridge game? Certainly. It"—Nugent's eyes were dark slits—"it was about the arrest of some Bund members."

"Right," said Craig looking very tired. "Alexia might know what happened to that clipping."

"You must have some reason for connecting the checks with the Bund."

"No," said Craig. "I can't remember hearing him talk of the Bund—in any special way. It was only that clipping and the mystery of these checks that started me thinking and putting them together with my father's previous views. The dates on the checks, too, correspond with the period during which my father was theoretically favorable to the announced German plan. That was the year before the war; he never believed there would be a war."

"But you think that before the war he gave these checks to the Bund and that Frederic Miller believed he was a Nazi."

"Certainly."

itary code of etiquette requires that the rank be designated.

Today's Horoscope
You are the type of person who would rather do things yourself than direct others in doing them. You are quick, impulsive and very energetic; shrewd and capable, and have good intuitive judgment. You like the out-of-doors, travel, and have many interests outside of your regular routine. You are loving and understanding. In spite of a sudden and wholly unexpected business reversal or change, some benefits will eventuate in an unusual manner during your next year. Novel business, military and engineering activities are well signified. Today's child will be financially fortunate, although liable to occasional sudden losses, also accidents through machinery and explosives.

STARS SAY—

For Wednesday, November 29

THE LUNAR transits for this day indicate a surprising or novel turn of events, which may be destined to lead to joyous fulfillments in professional, financial, career, labor and all sorts of ideals, ideas and objectives, but with the proviso that prudence, precaution and exceptional cleverness be exercised in the effort to reach cherished goals. There is likely to be some strenuous opposition or quarrels, turbulence and rashness, and as well there are omens of dangers through accidents, machinery and explosions. Keep alert.

If It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may look for a year in which lofty ambitions and high hopes and wishes may be attained by ingenuity, skill, innovation as well as the friendly offices of those in power and authority. Cultivate these with courtesy, finesse, and confidence, suppressing tendencies to rash or turbulent acts, and arguments, wrangling and discussions. Finance, labor, enhanced prestige and popularity should reward discretion and caution, the latter in connection with tools, machinery, fire explosions and all accidents.

A child born on this day should have high ideals and ambitions, with much efficiency to accomplish them. Its tumultuous and rash proclivities might be a dampener on personal prestige and popularity.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

LET HIM KEEP GUESSING
ONE MARK of an astute cardman is his unwillingness to solve the problems of his opponents. Many average players have the habit of treating their high cards like something which itches in their hands, and which must be played at the very first opportunity to avoid losing them. Others of course go to the contrary extreme and hold on to them as a matter of habit until it is too late. The most successful player is the one who varies that procedure, not just according to some established formula, but by the way the logic of the situation seems to dictate.

South did cue-bidding of his spade A instead of using the Blackwood convention because he was ready for a slam if North had the club A and no safe early diamond control. East kept his mouth shut because he reckoned a double would tell South how to play the hand, and he had no desire to indicate any particular lead to his partner. But East showed no such keenness in his defensive play.

West opened the diamond Q, which was won with the dummy's A, and the heart Q was led. East covered with his K, and the A won. Another heart settled East's other trump. Deciding to try to discard a diamond on a spade, South scored the spade A and K, ruffed the 4 with the heart 9, led the heart 2 to the 8, ruffed the spade 6 with the heart 10, led the heart 5 to the 7, discarded his diamond 6 on the now established spade 8, and led the club 10. East came right in with the A, and the contract was safe, as South had left only the club K and heart 2.

East had two chances to set the contract by refusing to co-operate with South. If he had played low on the heart Q lead, South would have put up the A, establishing the K. Again, when the club 10 was led, if he had played low, South would have had a nasty guess. If he decided East had the A, his play would have been the K, but if he reckoned West for it, his best play would have been the J, hoping East had the Q. But East made it easy for him by making guesses absolutely unnecessary on two occasions.

Home-Work Overalls

THE young are not geared to teagowns, but hours of their time are spent in the half-homework, half-leisure, which makes the teagown important to their elders. Aside from all fashion facts, any home costume which takes the wear and tear off clothes chosen for daytime wear away from home, is worth a lot economically.

The bright scarlet (or navy) overalls sketched here, and worn with a tattersal checked red, white and blue shirt, are suggested matter for the high school or college girl with books of learning to stay home with on the long Winter nights.

Obituary

George F. Denman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Denman, was born in Circleville, Ohio, June 10, 1897, and went to his home in the morning of November 22, 1944 at the age of 47 years, 5 months and 12 days.

On January 15, 1898 he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Grist, by the Rev. J. M. Yule, pastor of the United Brethren Church of Circleville, Ohio. His wife preceded him in death on January 4, 1921.

He leaves behind him a son, one child Miss Nellie O. Denman, who resides at the home.

He leaves behind him a son, one child Miss Nellie O. Denman, who resides at the home.

At a very tender age he heard the Master's call to "follow me" and immediately answered in the words of Isaiah "Lord here am I, send me."

From that moment on he never swayed in his determination to do the Master's will. This fact will be attested to by all who had the privilege of sharing his acquaintance.

His attendance at Sunday School is indeed an enviable one. It covers a span of 35 years for when he was but two years of age he began to listen to the teaching of God's word which he very soon became a very devout believer.

At the age of 17 years, he joined the United Brethren Church, and across those 27 years he was most loyal to the vows he took at the altar of the church. He was received into the church by the Rev. A. D. Johnson, then the pastor.

He holds two records of service to his church the counterpart of which it would be difficult to find. First he was a faithful trustee of the church for a period of 50 years and during those years it was not hard to discover that his first interest was the extension of the kingdom of God through the development of the local communion. Second, he was secretary of the official board for a like period of 50 years at which task he was a faithful servant.

There were two units of society in which he thoroughly believed, and around which his life revolved. These were his home and the church.

For 64 years he lived in the same house. From this home there went into the community a Christian influence that shall not become stilled in the passing of the days but shall live and thrive in the hearts of neighbors and friends down through succeeding generations.

To him the church was more than an institution. It was a place where the divine presence became a reality. It was there where he found great pleasure in the midweek service as well as all services of his glorious church.

"Crossing the Bar"
Alfred Tennyson
If he could speak to us in this hour I think I would say in the words of Tennyson.
"Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me,
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.
But such a tide as moving seems
Too full for sound or foam.
When that from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.
Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark,
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark.
For though from out our bosoms
Time and place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my pilot face to face,
When I have crossed the bar."

Truly like the one of old: "He walked with God and is not for God to be missed."

CARD OF THANKS
I wish to express my sincere thanks to my neighbors, friends and relatives for their kindness and sympathy shown during the illness and after the death of my father George F. Denman. To all who gave floral offerings, the singers, the Reverends Huston, Gruesser, Wm. L. Kuhn and Wm. G. Kuhn for their consoling words and the L. M. Miller company for the efficient services.

HUTSON ASSURED OF MORE PRO GRID LEAGUE TITLES

CHICAGO, Nov. 29—Concluding his tenth regular season against the Card-Pitts in Chicago last Sunday with two touchdowns and five extra points, Don Hutson today was just about assured his fifth consecutive scoring championship and his fourth straight pass receiving title in the National Football League.

Official statistics, released today show the Green Bay end with a season's total of 85 points and a 27 point lead over Frank Sinkwich of Detroit, who has one more game to play during the 1944 pro campaign. Hutson's five pass receptions gave him a total of 58 for the season and left him a comfortable margin over Jim Benton of Cleveland.

Benton would have to catch 21 passes against Philadelphia on Dec. 10 in the Rams' only remaining game to tie the Packer veteran.

Hutson's total yards gained on passes, 966 on 58 receptions, is the second largest of his career and the second highest total for one season in the history of football. He set the world's record in 1942 when he gained 1,211 yards on 74 receptions, also the world's record. In 10 games this fall, Hutson, who has attempted to retire each of the last three seasons, has gained an average of 16.6 yards every time he caught a pass.

Bill Paschal of the New York Giants, the league's defending ground gaining champion, regained his first place from John Gargas of the Card-Pitts combine.

Paschal now has 625 yards in 149 ball-carrying attempts, with two games to go, while Gargas, who closes out his season against the Chicago Bears next Sunday at Pittsburgh, has 610.

RADIO NEWS NOTES

CBS has copped an exclusive on the Army-Navy football game December 2, which promises to be one of the greatest grid classics of all time. Andre Kostelanetz and Lilly Pons, soon to go overseas, want to appear as a radio team when they return. Asking price for the duo is $12,500 per week.

Dunninger, the "Master Mentalist," bows from the Blue Network after the December 27 program. It is said that agency executives are trying to swing the Nelson Eddy show from its current Wednesday night position into the Sunday spot vacated by Kostelanetz. Ilene Woods and Bob Johnston start their own five a week series December 4.

Harry Hagen and Harry Conover, the model man, are collaborating on a radio show titled "Cover Girl."

MGM's "Screenest" bows off the air December 8. Jimmy Durante, heading East, will do his show from New York December 8. Charles Winninger, originally slated to emcee Beatrice Kay's "Gaslight Gaities," has been replaced by Michael O'Shea, the film star, "House Party," a new audience participation show, will make its debut some time between January 1 and 15. Art Linkletter will emcee Clifford Fischer, night club impresario, is seeking Hildegarde, the radio chanteuse, for the opening show of his Les Ambassadeurs in Paris.

Vincent Sheehan, foreign correspondent, will go to Europe soon to cover that war area. Bing Crosby has been named the favorite entertainer of GI radio listeners in the South Pacific.

Larry Stewart, handsome young singer, has been added to the cast of "Hollywood Mystery Time," warbling the program's theme music, "The Way You Look Tonight."

Scott Elliott, juvenile actor who originally played the role of "Oogie Pringle" on the "Date With Judy" program until movie work conflicted, has resumed his role in the show.

Autograph hunters virtually ignored Ann Rutherford and Adolphe Menjou in the rush to obtain Joseph Ciminello's signature on a recent "Let Yourself Go" program. Although Ciminello is not a famous actor, he does have one claim to immortality—namely, siring a set of quadruplets!

Sister Kenney Treatment Being Given At Berger Hospital

NURSES HELP IN YOUTH'S FIGHT FOR RECOVERY

Boyd Kuhlwein Showing Signs Of Improvement From Paralysis

A courageous young man who will be 20 December 23 is staging a fight to return to normal life at Berger hospital.

Boyd Kuhlwein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kuhlwein, Ashville, is being assisted in his fight against one of the most dreaded diseases known, by the entire Berger hospital staff, Dr. R. S. Hosler, relatives and friends.

"But it is his courage and grand disposition which have given us more hope than anything else," declared Nurse Carolyn Dennis, Boyd's aunt and one of the hospital personnel who is helping nurse him back to health.

The youth was stricken with infantile paralysis August 18 and lost complete use of his body August 21. He was taken to University hospital in Columbus and brought to Berger hospital November 8.

Here he is receiving a modified form of the Sister Kenney method of treatment. All of the nurses help in giving the treatments but Mrs. Dennis is actually in charge. She has had considerable massage experience, one of the secrets of the treatment, and she carefully observed treatment given the youth while he was in University hospital.

She reports Boyd has shown considerable improvement recently. Although he cannot use his legs yet his body has shown improvement. He is able to sit up on the side of the bed with help.

The treatments consist of applying hot packs on muscles and manipulation and massage of muscles. The average treatment takes 2½ hours. Hot baths which give the patient's legs a chance to "float" also will be given.

The hospital staff has been handicapped in its first application of the Sister Kenney treatments here by lack of equipment. Tubs at the

MAYOR TO GIVE SOUVENIR BATON TO TED LEWIS

Mayor Ben H. Gordon Wednesday was preparing to send to Ted Lewis an ebony and ivory silver baton, a souvenir of Egypt.

The baton was secured in Egypt for Mayor Gordon by his brother, Sgt. S. R. Gordon, 3175 Signal Service, APO 678, care of the postmaster, New York, N.Y.

Inscribed on the baton are the words, "Ted Lewis, Circleville, Ohio, souvenir of Egypt." On the box in which the baton is enclosed are the words "presented by Ben H. Gordon."

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

SIGNIFICANT G. O. P. POST-MORTEM

House Republican leaders headed by shrewd Minority Leader Joe Martin and astute, hard-hitting Republican Congressional Campaign Committee Chairman Charles Halleck of Indiana held a very significant secret post-mortem on the elections last week.

Nine lower-chamber GOP bigwigs attended the session in a Washington hotel, devoted four hours to letting their hair down, setting up a program for 1945 and 1946.

Most insistent demand of all was voiced by Halleck, who wants to start working at once for the 1948 Presidential campaign. Halleck demanded that the Republican National Committee stop fumbling, forget about vacations, start collecting money at once for an enlarged staff, plus an enlarged program to swing the nation to the GOP.

Joe Martin tried to name a man of his own who would actually run the Republican National Committee under the chairman. But he was stymied. Martin said he thought Herbert Brownell would be okay in the chairman's chair for the next couple of months, but suggested that someone be appointed executive director of the committee to do the bulk of the work under Brownell. This was vigorously opposed by Cliff Hope of Kansas, Les Arends of Illinois, Tom Jenkins of Ohio and others present.

"ME TOO" REFRAIN MONOTONOUS
One thing the GOP Congressmen agreed on was that they were fed up with "me too" Republican candidates who blast Roosevelt but say "me too" to the New Deal domestic program. This was aimed squarely at Tom Dewey and at Wendell Willkie's campaign in 1940. Cracked Indiana's Halleck:

"For twelve years the people who have been opposed to the New Deal haven't had a chance to vote against the New Deal. All they get is a 'me too' candidate who winks at them as he passes."

Halleck demanded that the Republican National Committee go to work at once, or else be bypassed for the next couple of years by GOP members of Congress who, working independently, would carry on as they see fit.

"If the National Committee doesn't go out right away and start a big fund-raising program, then we will do it here," said Halleck.

He was referring to the Republican Campaign Committee which he heads.

"There's plenty of money now," Halleck said, "and it won't be available later. If the National Committee doesn't get it, then my committee will and we'll run things our own way too."

The meeting adjourned with the decision to let the assembled Congressmen's recommendations go to the GOP National Committee for action and approval.

'HIRE A HALL'

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—If you feel like fighting with your landlord and are sure you are right it's a good idea to have a couple of witnesses who can stand by you. There were two witnesses to the fight between landlord Thomas E. Leavitt, of New Haven, and his tenant, Charles Doherty, but they were no help to either party. Both were women and one listened to the sound of fighting through an air heating chute and the other saw the shadows of two fighting men on a drawn window shade. Neither could fix blame, so the judge fined both men for breach of the peace.

A CHALLENGE TO THE WATER COMPANY

The purpose of the election is NOT to determine that the City should buy the water system for any certain sum of money.

The purpose IS to determine whether the City shall have the right to have a jury of Pickaway County citizens place a fair value on the system, in other words, whether the City be permitted to file condemnation proceedings in the local Common Pleas Court.

After such valuation has been determined, then the voters MAY have the right to decide whether or not the City should issue mortgage revenue bonds to buy the system at that price.

This Is the REAL Issue

Why does the Water Company fear a determination of value by a jury? Does it feel that a jury will not think the system as valuable as the Company would have you believe? Are they afraid for experts to appraise their property at its true value? If they do not fear this, then why do they oppose it? LET THEM ANSWER THIS!!

An application for the sale of all the Ohio Water Service stock owned by Federal Water & Gas Corporation was filed with the Securities & Exchange Commission on Nov. 15, 1944. The hearing, we understand, is set for Dec. 15, 1944. Is the Water Company fighting this election for fear that a "Yes" vote will upset their plans for sale of their stock and that the S. E. C. will then order its individual properties sold? Why does the Company refuse a sale to the City then ask for a sale to someone else? Could the reason be that certain Water Company officials are afraid of losing their high-salaried jobs which the people of Circleville are now helping to pay?

You Have Nothing To Lose If You Vote "YES"

If you vote "YES" then we can find out what the system is actually worth.
If you vote "NO," your chances of owning the system, obtaining soft water, securing better fire protection, lower rates and polite, efficient service are virtually gone.
